Related Local and Federal Laws: The Small Business Jobs Act of 2010 ("Act"), removed cell phones from the definition of listed property for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2009. The Act did not address the treatment of employer-provided cell phones (or other electronic communication devices, hereafter referred to collectively as "cell phones") as taxable fringe benefits. The IRS addressed this matter in Notice 2011-72 (IRB 2011-38) stating that employer-provided cell phones could be treated as excludible fringe benefits, being deemed to have met the Sec. 162 substantiation rules, so long as certain requirements were met.

I. SCOPE

Cell phones are an important and necessary form of communication to fulfill many of the job duties of the employees of American University. This policy is designed both for organizational cost efficiency and to allow employees who have a documented business need for flexibility in choice of cellular service provider and device. However, there are members of the AU community whose responsibilities exempt them from this allowance policy. They will be provided fully paid cell phone or other electronic communication device during their employment. All other forms of ongoing reimbursement for personal cell phone usage must conform to this policy.

II. POLICY STATEMENT

A. Employee Allowance for BYOD Cell Phones

Cell phone allowances are intended to offset an employee's expenses related to business use of a personal device and service plan. Employees must have a demonstrated business need for a mobile device, as defined under Section III. C. "Employee Eligibility", and this need must be regularly reviewed and certified by his or her supervisor and the unit budget manager.

The allowance, which is provided through payroll on a nontaxable basis, is a single flat rate and is determined by the Office of Finance and Treasurer based on average basic cellular costs for the area and benchmark data of other institutions. The allowance is meant to cover business costs only, as reasonably expected, and not the full expense of service for a personal cell phone. American University will not provide funding for the purchase or replacement of a personal cell phone in addition to the monthly allowance amount. Allowances will not be processed retroactively. The university reserves the right to change the allowance amount based on changes in the market.

B. Exempt Personnel

A member of the President’s Cabinet may designate certain AU personnel, based on operational need, to receive fully paid (including international coverage) cell phone or other electronic communication device through their unit’s account. Such personnel will be exempt from the allowance provisions of this Policy. OIT will provide a standard set of cellular phone services to support such personnel.
